HANGS HIMSELF FOR GRIEF OVER HIS DEAD WIFE

Wilhelm Doepping a Suicide Two Years From Day He Became a Widower.

THEIR ASHES TO MINGLE.

In Farewell Letter He Directs That One Urn Hold the Dust of Both.

bedroom and died during the night. clone in his home at No. 341 East Seventy-eighth street.

To his adopted daughter, Rose, nineteen years old, who was his house-keeper and his only companion in America, the old man left a note, bequeathing to her the leaden urn containing his wife's ashes, which rested on a table in his bedroom within three feet of where he died. He instructed her to have his body cremated and his ashes mingled with those of his wife and placed in a brass urn, the make and size of which he advised. The note

Together at Last.

"To Rose, my adopted daughter: Her ashes are in the little jar on the table. Always preserve them and treasure them. Have my body cremated as quickly as possible and the residue gined to all that remains of my wife's body. At last we will be together-all that is mortal of both of us. Blame me not for what I am doing. Mathilda died two years ago to-day. I could not suffer the agony of separation from her longer. I go to join her. Forgive the pain I cause you. Love our memories and don't blame your loving but gries afflicted parent. Good-by,

"YOUR FATHER." A brief note addressed to "The Cor ner" and another marked "The Polle turned home this morning. Both le ters simply stated that death was prebe placed in the way of the execution one to the Coroner begged that nothing his wishes as contained in a lett night to visit some friends. She seeme reluctant to go, but he finally prevailed upon her to spend the night with some girl companions. He said that he expected a gentleman with whom he wanted to talk business. Unsuspecting the girl departed. She returned short!

Warned in a Dream. "Oh, I had such a frightful dream she whispered to Sergt. Curran on the street as she hurried to her home "Won't you come with me and see, fo fear that father has done violence himself. I dreamed and dreamed the most horrid things." The sergeant accompanied the girl and broke in the door leading from the street. It was not until they entered the man's bedroom and saw a chair turned over that the restlity of the girl's dreams was seen. A surgeon was called, but Doepping had been dead for hours. The chair showed how he had carefully arranged for his death. Hose who goes by her foster father's name, had to be revived by stimulants. When she recovered, she bravely took up the burden of arranging for Doepong's funeral and insisted that she was capable of executing his wishes. She would not tell what disposition she will make of the ashes of husband and wife.

DR. BRYANT FASSETT DEAD.

Dr. Bryant Fassett, twenty-eight years old, of Elmira, N. Y., son of J. Sloat Fassett, died early to-day of kidney trouble, in Roosevelt Hospital. He came here two weeks ago for for treatment, but the efforts of the doctors were unavailing. His wife and his father and mother were at his bedside when he expired.

NEW SPRING GOWNS SHOWN AT ARNOLD & CONSTABLE'S.

Startling Changes in Season's Styles as Decreed by Worth, Paquin and Drecoll, of Paris.

The spring season of 1908 is being and frills at Arnold & Constable's. Broadway and Ninoteenth street. Paris ian models from the famous Frenc houses delight the eye and gladden the here they find exquisite gowns for morning, afternoon and evening wear. Startling departures from the styles tention of those who admire originality in frocks. The skirt made with the fashitonable "Paquin wrinkles" at the walst line is continued in princess ef-fect four inches above the waist. Irish crocket lace in the same shade of tive waist, with sleeves suggestive of the kimono style, so popular last season. at Arnold & Constable's, are to be the feature of the season, for both walking and evening gowns show this artistic innovation.

An exquisitely soft chiffon gown in white, hand painted in blue, was the centre of a group of adm rers yesterday afternoon. Simplicity was its keynte, and the gown depended upon its cut for its graceful beauty. Empire in line, with modified kimono sleeves, its sole adcramen, was a policy blue has line, with modified annihil secretary and a definition attached to the skirt. At the knees ribbon was run in and out through the chiffen.

Directly Parish and Worth, these of the most fashionable modifies of Paris, have desired that the first sair, the Paquin "writhles." sasses and small kimono sleeves shall be the leading features of the soming season.
